Dear Friends,

We at St. Scholastica Monastery had hoped that with the Testimonial Dinner we could introduce a year of special attention to care of the earth with events and study groups about care for God’s creation. The aim was to heed Pope Francis in Laudato Si, where he calls us to the care of the earth, our common home. We had thought to start with the ecology of water in the Great Lakes Region, relating these to understanding the threat of sea level rising faced by 40% of humanity who live in areas within 60 miles of seacoasts.

Our world’s experience since mid-March, instead, is of trying to grasp the reality of the pandemic Covid-19, which some describe as a hidden enemy. As a human race we are impacted by its effects, directly through the loss of loved ones, or indirectly by the news, state by state and country by country with overwhelming statistics of sickness and death. We can feel helpless in the face of it, and we are subject to precautions required while awaiting the development of a vaccine to protect against its ravages.

And we struggle to know how to respond as health care and the economy are impacted, as are peoples’ livelihoods, education, and life plans.

And as we are threatened by Covid-19, there is the simultaneous threat of racism, which some call Covid-1619, recognizing that racism began in this country with the arrival of the first slave ship from Africa.

How can we collaborate in responding as a human community to heal earth’s ecology and to heal humanity’s Covid-19 and Covid-1619?

A story in the Dialogues of St. Gregory the Great tells of St. Benedict having had a vision of the entire world united as if in a single ray of light, and the light was God’s love. May St. Benedict guide us to desire and ask for the grace to be united in love with this beautiful world and all of its peoples, and to yearn for and work for solutions for the illnesses and injustices that trouble our global community.

Yours in peace,

Sister Judith Murphy, OSB
Prioress

Dear Sisters,

This is to thank you for my excellent education and your continuing mission to our broken world. I really enjoy Sacro Speco and your commitment to social justice.

Again, many thanks,

O n Sunday, February 23, the Benedictine Oblates of St. Scholastica monastery hosted Judith Valente, Benedictine Oblate of Mount St. Scholastica, for a presentation on the Art of Pausing. As a former workaholic, Ms. Valente drew from her own life and the writings of Thomas Merton, Dorothy Day, and Buddhist monk Thich Nhat Hanh to emphasize the benefits of pausing. We are grateful to the Benedictine Oblates for hosting this meaningful afternoon of reflection.

O n the chilly, bleak evening of March 6, 70 guests gathered for a Taizé prayer service to listen to and reflect on scripture in the St. Scholastica chapel. Accompanied by live musicians, they sang beautiful chants composed by the Taizé monastic community in Eastern France. The light from a single candle traveled throughout the congregation until each guest’s candle was lit. Participants then processed toward the altar to place their lit candles into sand-filled containers. As candles glowed in the darkness, a meditative silence filled the room. Once the closing chant ended, several people lingered in the silence. Oblates Maureen Kaucher, and Paula Kowalkowski together with Sister Patricia Coughlin, OSB, organized the moving service. Participants included singers Susanne Santos and Paula Kowalkowski, cellist Linda Baggerly, flautist Sandra Korelc, and pianist Maureen Kaucher. Many thanks to Oblate Matthew Ambre who created an original illustration for the program.

S ister Belinda Monahan, OSB – along with her colleague Tim Higgins, Sheil Catholic Center’s Campus Minister – organized a virtual Busy Student Retreat for Northwestern University students who are members of the Sheil Catholic Center. The young adults met daily during the last week of April with an assigned spiritual companion. The leaders, who encouraged, accompanied, and listened to the students, included Sister Belinda, Fr. Adam MacDonald, SVD, Sister Aprilia Untarto SSps, Sister Jessi Beck, PBVM, and Mr. Tim Higgins. Each day, students committed to half an hour of personal prayer. At the end of the retreat, both students and spiritual companions convened as a whole to share their faith-building experiences. Despite the less-than-ideal setting, the virtual retreat proved to be a much-needed restorative respite in the midst of a busy spring semester.

A fter nearly a year in Namibia, Sister Patricia Crowley, OSB reports that the country remains a coveted spot for tourists despite Covid-19 restrictions. She continues to work monthly with 12 young women in spiritual direction sessions and loves every minute. She finds teaching four classes – English, Benedictine Spirituality, Human Development, and Christology – to young women in formation both stimulating and fun. Due to the lockdown, retreat leaders from outside the monastery have been limited; however, Sister Patricia has managed to lead 3 retreats and closed out her time with a final one at the end of July. In February, Sister Patricia welcomed one of her brothers along with his daughter to Namibia and then the three of them traveled to Cape Town, South Africa, which she calls “a truly beautiful place.” The pandemic, though well controlled in Namibia, has restricted Sister Patricia’s travels and prevented other guests from visiting her.

T his year the Benedictine Sisters’ annual retreat departed from its usual format in which an outside facilitator guides the Community through a three-day retreat. After months of isolation, illness, and uncertainty, the Community decided that this year, the Sisters would meet to share their own experiences from living through this time. Sister Patricia Coughlin, OSB guided the retreat, and the Community engaged in Contemplative Dialogue, a structured method of conversation. Each member received a set of questions to be used for personal reflection and for sharing with the group. The questions were designed to lead the Sisters to meditate on their feelings and more closely observe themselves and others. The questions also included spiritual and scriptural resources which prompted Sisters to contemplate how God might be leading the community into the future.

Sister Ann Sharp, OSB (1920-2019)

“A Chicago native, Sister Ann attended Sullivan High School for two years, and then transferred to St. Scholastica High School. She became a postulant of the Benedictine Sisters of Chicago during the fall of 1937, her senior year. She professed her final vows in 1942. Sister Ann attended De Paul University for both her Bachelor’s of Education Degree and her Master’s in Education.

While still completing her studies, she began teaching at Queen of All Saints in 1940 as a member of the original faculty. In 1945 she taught middle to upper grade students at Mother of God in Waukegan, IL. Sister Ann taught her remaining twenty-three years in elementary education at St. Symphorosa, St. Joseph, in Chicago, IL and at St. Lambert in Skokie, IL. In 1960 Sister Ann ministered in Colorado at St. Michael Parish School in Cañon City. After two years, she was asked to move to St. Joseph Parish in Salida, CO., where she became principal and superior.

In 1968 she joined the faculty at St. Scholastica Academy in Chicago and taught theology classes mainly to freshmen and sophomores, and was senior class moderator for three years. She served as Dean from 1973-1978. Sister Ann was elected Prioress of the community in 1978 and served until 1982. During her term, St. Joseph Court, a two-winged facility, was built at the north end of the 1906 monastery building, to be the health care facility for the Sisters. Sister Ann will be remembered for her fidelity to the Benedictine Sisters of Chicago, her understanding, empathy, compassion and laughter. She passed away on December 27, 2019.

Sister Joan Gannon, OSB
(1923-2020)

A native of Denver, Sister Amy chose to enter the Benedictines following her secondary education at St. Scholastica High School in Cañon City, Colorado, where she was a boarder for her junior and senior years. She entered the monastery in 1938. In August of 1940, she made her first profession of vows, and in 1943 her final vows. Sister Amy’s long career was in teaching middle and primary grades.

In the Chicago Archdiocese Sister Amy taught at St. Hilary, St. George, and St. John Nepomucene in Chicago, and at Mother of God in Waukegan, Illinois. During her 48 years in Colorado, she served effectively at St. Leander’s Parish and then at St. Mary’s in Pueblo, St. Michael Parish in Cañon, St. Michael Parish in Delta, and then as both teacher and principal at the St. Joseph Parish School in Salida. Then, assigned to the Academy in Cañon, she established a pre-school and served as the Director of the Alumnae there.

On retiring to the Monastery, she helped in the Finance Office daily until 2019. Sister Amy always had a peaceful and gentle way about her that made her memorable. Being the matriarch of her family she was beloved, but friends and former students also felt her genuine care. She died on February 27, 2020. Sister Johnette Sawyer, OSB
(1935-2020)

Born in Pueblo, CO., and taught by the Benedictine Sisters of Chicago at St. Leander, Sister Johnette Sawyer felt called to join the Benedictines during college. She entered the monastery in 1955. Her first profession of vows took place during the Easter season and her final vows were also made during the Eastertide of 1957. Sister Johnette had a long career in education and liturgical and parish ministry both in Colorado and Illinois. Sister Johnette exemplified a spirit of hospitality and a genuine interest in people. Always ready to welcome and engage in lively conversation, hers was a warm and welcoming spirit that made people feel at home.

On Easter Monday Sister Johnette was hospitalized after she contracted the coronavirus (COVID-19). Three weeks of treatment and care could not save her life, although she gave her all to not succumb. On May 1 she was anointed by the chaplain at St. Francis Hospital, Evanston, IL and she died May 2, after 63 years as a vowed Benedictine Sister.

To read more about Sister Johnette’s dedicated life of ministry in both the Archdiocese of Chicago and the Diocese of Pueblo, CO., please visit our news blog at www.osbchicago.org/news and look for her story posted on May 14th.

Sister Amy Campbell, OSB
(1920-2020)

On March 6, just before the shelter-in-place order went into effect in Illinois, many Oblates, Sisters, and guests gathered in St. Scholastica Chapel for an enriching and memorable Taizé Prayer Service.* When asked about the experience of planning and participating in the service, Oblate Paula Kowalkowski shared, “It was a joy to work on this first Taizé Service for the Monastery! It was truly a collaborative and creative labor of love between Oblates and the Sisters. We hope to offer several services throughout the year.” According to Oblate and SSA Chicago Alumna Maureen Kaucher, “There was a special prayerful and peaceful feeling in the air that night. The chapel holds a meaningful place in my heart, and it was a joy to be able to bring prayers, music, candle lighting, and people together. Paula’s reflection was touching and relatable. The service was very exciting because there were a number of new people who came that evening who may have been initially introduced through Judith Valente’s talk*. And people stayed afterward...to continue the peaceful feeling in such a beautiful place.”

Little did we know that the Taize Prayer Service would be one of the last public gatherings in the St. Scholastica Chapel until further notice.

Prior to the Covid-19 pandemic, the Monastery was able to welcome Oblates, especially during Feast Day celebrations. Unfortunately, like other places around the world, St. Scholastica Monastery has implemented important precautions, limitations, and the suspension of the reception of guests for the health and safety of our Sisters, especially the most vulnerable Sisters.

These restrictions are especially difficult as Oblates play an important role in our community: serving as art class leaders, porters, musicians, and community volunteers. Fortunately, through the gift of technology, the Oblates have managed to meet virtually for their regularly scheduled monthly gatherings with Sister Benita Coffey, OSB, Director of the Oblates in Chicago.
“The Covid-19 restrictions are especially difficult as Oblates play an important role in our community: serving as art class leaders, porters, musicians, and community event volunteers.”

Also, Sister Mary Susan Remsgar, OSB, liaison to the Pueblo Oblates, has similarly gathered the Oblates in Colorado for the monthly virtual meetings of prayer and fellowship. Additionally, many Oblates have coped with the coronavirus pandemic by engaging in creative projects, including mask making, art, poetry, and writing gospel reflections.

Last fall, Sister Virginia Jung, OSB, initiated a monthly Readers’ Circle, La Colomba “the dove” providing Oblates another opportunity to connect and explore important social justice works. Their first book was "The Beloved Community: How Faith Shapes Social Justice from the Civil Rights Movement to Today," by Charles Marsh. Due to the pandemic, the group has shifted to virtual meetings where they discuss contemporary works such as “The Time is Now: A Call to Uncommon Courage” by Sister Joan Chittister, OSB.

In some ways monastic life, as described by St. Benedict in The Rule, is compatible with life in the time of Covid. While our prayer and work has always been inclusive of silence and contemplation, the pandemic has forced the rest of society to slow down and possibly engage more reflectively with less outside noise or distraction.

Though the Benedictine custom of welcoming guests and the practice of hospitality remain limited during the pandemic, we look forward to the day restrictions are lifted and the Oblates can once again gather for mass, monthly meetings, and other events.

My father was a wholesale florist in the Rogers Park neighborhood of Chicago. He was a grower with lots of greenhouses but no flower shop. He learned his trade while working on the grounds of a palace in Poland. He emigrated to Chicago when he was in his 20s. I have many memories of his work: long houses filled with tall mums like a sea of various colors. I loved them. In those years, chrysanthemums were in great demand, often used to make corsages.

Around Christmas time, poinsettias were the flower of choice but their growth started long before December! My dad would purchase what looked like thick tan stems with little branches. They would get green stems and leaves and these shoots were cut off the sticks and put in sand and watered with mists. Since they were tender, they had about 8” glass at the sides of the benches and fine shading up above. Once the shoots were stronger, they were planted in small pots and then into larger pots, etc.

Azaleas were planted outside in spring and covered with manure. I would walk on the other side of the street until the “fragrance” dissipated. Lily bulbs, coming from Holland, had to be picked up at Midway Airport (no O’Hare yet) and that was a fun trip to collect the bulbs.

At holiday delivery time, my mother would go to the greenhouses with my dad and help with the records and the organizing of the orders. Since I was too small to go to school and my older sister went to school, I got to go with my mother and dad. I loved it! I got one of the men to make me a long low bench and I would play “Bakery”, displaying paper sweet rolls and whatever I could draw and selling all.

Great memories of the wonderful earthy smells, the cats who could cause trouble for my dad, myself being “in charge” of getting a bench made, and seeing my dad going down the aisles of plants talking to them.

After St. Scholastica High School, I attended Loyola University and then entered the Community. After Postulancy and Novitiate I began teaching at Queen of All Saints in Sauganash, and then at St. Symphorosa Parish near Midway Airport. I also taught in Pueblo, CO, and in Delta, CO, on the western slope of the Rockies discovering how a small town works. After that I taught for a few years at St. Joseph’s in the Cabrini Green projects, and later at St. George’s parish in the Stateway Gardens projects. These teaching assignments allowed me to get involved in many different cultures. My final teaching assignment was at St. Scholastica High School to teach English. I remember going to my first class, ready with a number of attention-getting methods and found that I didn’t know what to do. The girls were all quiet and sat ready to be taught.
I realized after teaching for a total of 25 years, that I would now become involved in jobs at the Priory. After a while, I knew that I was very interested in our grounds. Sister Patti Cielinski, OSB went to the Botanic Gardens and took a pruning class from Tim Johnson, a horticulturist at the Garden, and suggested that I contact him to come and take a look around our place and suggest some improvements. He came one day after work and looked around and said that he would help, jokingly saying, “I don’t know where to start!” Help was definitely needed and his enthusiasm encouraged me to start thinking of how best to nurture our grounds.

I began going to the Botanic Gardens for lectures and workshops. Talking to Tim, reading a lot, taking a good look at our grounds and thinking about a way to make them more friendly, began to stir my enthusiasm. Sometimes situations presented themselves like the Grotto rocks falling making it very dangerous. As well as overgrown grapevines that needed attention and decisions needed to be made. I realized that I was truly drawn to this type of work.

Eventually, as with all of us, I can identify the origins of many of my beliefs in regard to nature. It’s really kind of fun to recognize that experiences in my life have shaped my belief in nature now. And, of course, people in my life were part of all this. And so, I began to see our grounds as a source of growth for us, a place where we can watch and learn how nature works. We can grow more attuned to the living energy of creation. We can become respectful of the rhythms of nature and help to provide conditions for growth, knowing that we are part of this web of life. We can learn to slow down and see and sense the activity in nature and then it’s quite simple. We do what we can to provide conditions for life for all-weather, plants or butterflies or the tiny beings in the soil or even humans! We become more aware of obstacles and the source of them and how better to deal with them. We can observe how plants work together, not just their beauty, but their very being. We can pay attention to the developing methods of maintenance and to our thoughts about those methods. We can become aware of developing a healthy and beautiful spot on earth where all living beings can function well.

We can revel in a beautiful moment when color and air and sound and gentle breezes wrap around us, or when we delight in a novel use of our property or provide for really seeing and hearing or just letting be.

Why? Because we are part of the great community of life and we truly want to be a part of it!

“I can identify the origins of many of my beliefs in regard to nature. ”

Laudato Si and Ecological Conversion
by Sister Pat Coughlin, OSB

In May of 2015 Pope Francis published his second encyclical Laudato Si. It is the first papal encyclical in history about ecology and only the second to be addressed to all of humankind, not just Christians. (The first was Pacem in Terris published by Pope St. John XXIII in 1963.) Francis’ aim in publishing Laudato Si is to “…enter into dialogue with all people about our common home.” This wonderful document looks at the degradation of the earth, our common home, through a religious and spiritual point of view as well as a scientific one.

In 2016 I was invited by Sr. Terrri MacKenzie, SHCJ to join a team of people who were writing homily helps for priests who wanted to preach about Pope Francis’ encyclical Laudato Si. The project was launched by Fr. Michael Agliardo, SJ, then a professor of sociology at Loyola University Chicago, now a research scholar at Santa Clara University and the executive director of the United States Catholic Bureau. The idea came up in an ecology and faith group at the 2015 annual conference of the Association of U.S. Catholic Priests and Fr. Agliardo took it on. The group decided to ask Dan Misleh, the founding director of the Catholic Climate Covenant, to post the homily helps on the Catholic Climate Covenant website (catholicclimatecovenant.org), and Mr. Misleh agreed to do so.

The homily helps include a commentary that points out the ecological and spiritual links between the scripture readings for the Sunday and passages in Laudato Si that correspond to and amplify the message of the scripture. Relevant scripture passages are highlighted as are sections from Laudato Si that fit the commentary and the scripture. Two petitions that carry out the theme of the Sunday are included. Bulletin blurbs containing environmental tips are posted elsewhere on the web site.

Currently our team has three members: My colleagues are Fr. Bob Bonnot of the diocese of Youngstown, OH and executive director of the Association of U.S. Catholic priests and Fr. Joe Rozansky, OFM, former director of the the Office of Justice, Peace and Integrity of Creation for the Franciscan Holy Name Province and current co-director of the Franciscan Interprovincial Post-novitiate Program located in Chicago. Homilies for the Sundays and feast days for the three yearly cycles of the Sunday lectionary are complete and we are editing them and adding contemporary references.

One of the memorable statements made by Pope Francis in the encyclical is one in which he quotes Pope Benedict XVI:

The deserts of the world are growing because the internal deserts have become so vast. For this reason, the ecological crisis is also a summons to profound interior conversion. It must be said that some committed and prayerful Christians, with the excuse of realism and pragmatism, tend to ridicule expressions of concern for the environment. Others are passive; they choose not to change their habits and thus become inconsistent. So what they all need is an “ecological conversion”, whereby the effects of their encounter with Jesus Christ become evident in their relationship with the world around them. Living our vocation to be protectors of God’s handiwork is essential to a life of virtue; it is not an optional or a secondary aspect of our Christian experience.

In 2020 we are confronted with a perfect storm of intersecting world-changing events: a pandemic; growing awareness of systemic racism; protests, some of them violent; political instability; unemployment; and lack of adequate food for many families. Many people are overwhelmed and afraid. Others are isolated and depressed. Students are being deprived of a fuller education. Living our vocation to be protectors of God’s handiwork can slip far down on our list of priorities as we struggle to cope with the stresses of 2020.
Still, Pope Francis urges us to be ecologically converted. He knows that addressing the impact of human activity on global warming is the ultimate pro-life issue of our time. The encyclical is a call, a "summons to profound interior conversion." That phrase sounds serious and scary because it is serious and scary. Francis knows that responding to a call and profound interior conversion are different things. We might read Laudato Si’s call and feel motivated to engage in some action to address climate change like doing more recycling or reducing our carbon footprint, both good things to do. But interior conversion is a lifelong work. It demands that we see the world differently than the last 200 years of industrial development and our consumerist culture have conditioned us to see, and Francis is aware of the many defenses we are likely to come up with to avoid the discomfort that changing our worldview and our priorities brings. So, ecological conversion demands self-reflection and prayer to sustain it.

Conversion is an important value in the Benedictine Rule and in the lives of Benedictines professed and lay. It was so important to St. Benedict that he had his monks make a perpetual vow of conversatio morum suorum, (conversion of his/her way of life) which can be understood as accepting at a deep personal level values that can guide our actions and behavioral patterns. This is the work of ecological conversion—to learn as much as we can about what is happening to our common home and develop values that are earth-friendly:

This conversion calls for a number of attitudes which together foster a spirit of generous care, full of tenderness. First it entails gratitude and gratuitousness, recognition that this world is God’s loving gift and that we are called quietly to imitate God’s generosity in self-sacrifice and good works...Various convictions of our faith...can help us enrich the meaning of this conversion. These include the awareness that each creature reflects something of God and has a message to convey to us...Then too there is the recognition that God created the world, writing into it an order and a dynamism that human beings have no right to ignore.

Community is another Benedictine value. In Laudato Si Pope Francis expresses his conviction that the world is a community made up of humans and the other creatures that inhabit the earth. In many places in the encyclical Francis writes of the dire need of the poorest members of the earth community.

A sense of deep communion with the rest of nature cannot be real if our hearts lack tenderness, compassion and concern for our fellow human beings ...Everything is connected. Concern for the environment thus needs to be joined to a sincere love for our fellow human beings and an unwavering commitment to resolving the problems of society.

Climate change is a global problem with grave implications: environmental, social, political, and for the distribution of goods. It represents one of the principal challenges facing humanity in our day. Its worst impact will probably be felt by developing countries in coming decades. Many of the poor live in areas particularly affected by phenomena related to warming...There has been a tragic rise in the number of migrants seeking to flee from the growing poverty caused by environmental degradation.

Care for the earth has been part of the Benedictine charism since the sixth century. Lifelong conversion, simplicity of life, reverence for all people and things, belief that the Divine Presence is everywhere, concern for the common good, and hospitality to travelers and migrants are values taught by both Sts. Benedict and Francis. Can we embrace them in the time we have left and let them motivate us to take practical and effective steps to mitigate climate change?

Laudato Si is a prophetic document. It is not another letter from the Pope to Catholics; it is a call to action and solidarity to all the people of the earth to work together for the good of our planet and an urgent plea for debate, action and spiritual growth which Pope Francis sees as essential to the restoration of our common home.

The Alumnae of St. Scholastica Academy/High School Chicago will gather in the next few weeks to walk down memory lane and celebrate their reunion. In these uncertain times of Covid-19, with an abundance of caution, we will not meet as planned this year in person but will celebrate virtually! The event will take place September 19th via Zoom, for graduates of St. Scholastica Academy in classes ending in '0' or '5. As soon as it is safe to plan the dinner and mass we will do so and notify alumnae immediately. For more information, visit www.osbchicago.org/reunion.
